Darrell Diefenbach - Bullfighter

Darrell Diefenbach has put more on the line for the Wrangler NFR than many. He immigrated to the U.S. from Australia, where he rode bulls and broncs, fought bulls and watched lots of NFR videos, telling himself, "If I don't make the Finals in five years, I'll go home."

No worries, mate. Three years later, in 2001, Diefenbach achieved his goal, and he's been selected every year since then – 10 consecutive times. But due to the hazards of his chosen profession, he sat home in 2006 and 2008 with a broken neck and a broken leg, respectively ... and that's not all. "It broke my heart," he said. "You go all year with that goal. To sit home is hard when you put as much into it as I do."

"But when I'm there in the (Thomas & Mack) alley stretching, and I hear (announcer) Bob Tallman getting the crowd pumped up and cheering, just like on the old NFR tapes I used to watch, that gets my motor running. And when I step into the arena, nothing else matters except taking care of the guys. To be selected by your peers to protect them at the Finals, it's an honor – it's worth all the bumps and bruises and hookings and getting run over. If you love something enough, then you give everything you've got, and I love protecting bull riders."

Dusty Tuckness - Bullfighter

They say the Wrangler NFR gets in your blood. Clearly, Dusty Tuckness is infected with NFR fever.

"One of my goals since I was a kid has always been to go to the Finals, and another is to beat the records of other bullfighters who have gone there. To go once is an achievement, but to go 10 times like Darrell Diefenbach or 14 times like Joe Baumgartner, that's the ultimate goal. I want to push forward and get myself into their category."

But Tuckness is driven by more than competitive fire.

"I try to be as consistent as I can, do my job day in and day out, and hope that will lead to a good outcome at the end of the year. Every year I get to go back, it means I've been consistent and the bull riders trust me and want to see me in the arena, so to keep going back is a real honor."

"This year was a phenomenal Finals. Every performance had some kind of action for us, some chances to take some shots for the guys, and we had to get aggressive every performance. For me, that's a fun day at the office. And when the top 15 bull riders in the world presented us with an extra $12,000, they were saying we meant a lot to them, that we did our jobs and they wanted to take care of us."

Kenny Bergeron - Bullfighter

Like everybody headed to their first Wrangler NFR, Kenny Bergeron got his share of free advice. Some folks told him to look at it as just any other rodeo, but Bergeron found Las Vegas far more intense than he expected.

"It was the greatest experience of my professional life," he says. "I've seen the NFR so many times on TV and dreamed about being there, but it's nothing like I imagined. You are elected by the top 20 bull riders to go there and protect them. It's the pressure of not letting them down, the pressure of 18,000 people on top of you, the million or so watching on TV. You have to prove you are the best. I felt like there was no room for error – I had to be in the right spot, make the right move, take the hook at the right time. It's the most difficult bullfighting I've ever done because all the guys are so good. Even when they get in trouble, they can still stay on the bulls, so you can't run in too soon, but you have to be in the right place when they need you.

"Being in the arena with General Diefenbach and Dusty Tuckness – I couldn't have asked for two better guys. Darrell put his arm around me and said, 'You deserve to be here.' And to be a footnote in NFR history with two guys like that was an honor."

Robbie Hodges - Barrelman

Robbie Hodges went into his first Wrangler NFR thinking he'd simply celebrate the end of his best year in the barrel. But he came home with a whole new understanding of the NFR and even the PRCA.

"It was one big blur from Oct. 15, when I got the news, until the 17 days we worked there," says Hodges. "The guys that had been there before, and all the NFR and PRCA staff – everyone was so nice, and I learned how hard everyone works. I saw how things operate, and I gained a whole new respect for everyone at the office! And Shawn Davis ... you can't get six cowboys to agree on where to eat a burger, but he runs that production by handling 160 of 'em. I was so honored to be there – I always wanted to be recognized as the guy that works the barrel, like Quail Dobbs, Rudy Burns, Ted Kimzey and Rick Young – too many to mention.

"This year (2010) was the best bullfighting ever at the NFR – those bullfighters were on!"

"Every day since then, I think about something fun that happened at the Thomas & Mack. I'd like to think that me going to the NFR will show other guys they could get a chance. I've never had a Tour rodeo, never gone to the Dodge National Circuit Finals Rodeo, only had my card five years. There is a chance for the little guy."

PRCA Bullfighters, Clowns and Barrelmen

Contestants and judges aren't the only people in the rodeo arena. Depending on the event, there may be bullfighters, clowns and/or a barrelman, as well. All of these rodeo participants are card-holding members of the PRCA who have been recommended by leaders in their categories and approved by the PRCA based on their performance.

Bullfighters are rodeo athletes whose job is to protect bull riders after they dismount or are bucked off the bulls. Bullfighters move toward the bull immediately to distract it with sound, movement and sometimes touch, in order to direct its attention away from the cowboy and toward the exit gate. Bullfighters often throw their bodies between the bull and rider, and may take a hooking (a "punch" from the bull's horns) so the bull rider doesn't have to.

Clowns are not responsible for cowboy protection; they are entertainers who keep the audience engaged during breaks in the rodeo. Many visit with audiences before the rodeo, and some perform public relations functions in local communities before and during the rodeo.

Barrelmen work in both areas – they entertain the audience, often by interacting comically with the rodeo announcers, and they help with bull rider protection. The barrelman places his barrel where it may give the bull an alternate target after the bull ride. He may jump in and out of it as needed, or position it so the cowboy or bullfighters can use it as cover.

All three categories of personnel are considered integral to rodeo and are part of every PRCA-sanctioned rodeo.

This list includes insured PRCA-member bullfighters, clowns and barrelmen as of Jan. 13 or March 28, 2011 (and inductees of the ProRodeo Hall of Fame), and describes much, but not necessarily all, of their experience in the PRCA and some allied organizations.
